Leanny Soto of Booth Movers Named 2025 Driver of the Year

The Driver of the Year Award recognizes a professional who represents the very best of the moving industry, a driver who is safe, dependable, and dedicated to delivering exceptional service to customers and their company. Each year, the New Jersey Warehouse & Movers Association (NJWMA) honors an individual who takes pride in their work, serves as a role model to others, and consistently goes above and beyond.

At the NJWMA's 56th Annual Convention at the Golden Nugget in Atlantic City, Leanny Soto of Booth Movers was honored as the 2025 Driver of the Year.

Leanny began his career with Booth Movers in 2007 at just 19 years old, starting as a helper. By the age of 21, he had earned his CDL and became a full-time driver. Since then, he has moved approximately 5,000 families, both locally and long-distance, maintaining an outstanding safety record with an extremely low claims ratio and no notable driving accidents in the past five years.

In 2019, Leanny's leadership and professionalism earned him the role of Project Manager, where he leads crews on complex residential and commercial moves. Fully cross-trained, he is equally skilled in warehouse operations, managing high-value and specialty items, and even stepping in for the Operations Manager when needed. Known for his calm demeanor, bilingual communication, and strong work ethic, Leanny is admired by both customers and coworkers alike.

Outside of work, Leanny is a devoted father to his daughter, Skyla, supporting her at track and field events and sharing his Dominican heritage with pride.

Booth Movers owners Adam Padla and Lindsay Padla Sanborn expressed how proud they are of Leanny and the example he sets for the entire Booth Movers family.
